16.0 Anti-Doping Compliance

Some drivers may be taking a variety of medications, including those for blood pressure and other health conditions. While most of these medications are acceptable, there are certain drugs listed as prohibited substances under the World Anti-Doping Code International Standard 2022.

Drivers are required to sign the "Compliance to Anti-Doping Prohibited List" section on the application form. Any regularly taken medications that may fall under the prohibited substances list should be disclosed to the Ministry of Sports - Institute of Sports Medicine. In certain professional levels of motorsport, drivers may continue to take prohibited substances if they have a valid medical reason.

If a driver fails to declare any medication they are taking, or have started taking, which falls under the prohibited substance categories listed in the annexure of the license application form, and is later found to be using such substances during a spot medical check by the Ministry of Sports, the driver will be subject to appropriate action. However, SLAS will not assume responsibility in this regard.

The responsibility for declaring the need for exemptions from prohibited substances lies solely with the driver. Drivers can submit a request to the Ministry of Sports for a Therapeutic Use Exemption (TUE) through the Institute of Sports Medicine, which allows them to continue their treatment while remaining in compliance with anti-doping rules
